Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 24, Nokia of America Corporation (“Nokia”) respectfully submits this unopposed motion for leave to intervene in each of the above-captioned related actions.<sup>1</sup> Nokia seeks to intervene because it sells equipment to Defendants T-Mobile USA, Inc. and Sprint LLC (“T-Mobile”), AT&T Services, Inc., AT&T Mobility, LLC, and AT&T Corp. (“AT&T”), and Cellco Partnership, d/b/a Verizon Wireless and Verizon Corporate Services Group Inc. (“Verizon”) (collectively, “Defendants”) that Plaintiff Headwater Partners II LLC (“Headwater”) alleges infringes its U.S. Patent Nos. 9,094,868 (the “’868 Patent”) and 9,413,502 (the “’502 Patent”).

As the designer and manufacturer of some of the accused products, Nokia has a substantial interest in defending its products against the allegations raised in the litigation and is most likely to be in the best position to defend against certain of Headwater’s claims. Nokia’s Motion is timely, and no existing party will suffer prejudice if Nokia intervenes. Moreover, Nokia’s intervention will not result in these cases being delayed, and Nokia will not move to transfer these cases if this Motion is granted. This Court granted Nokia’s motions to intervene on similar facts and circumstances in XR Communications LLC d/b/a Vivato Technologies v. AT&T Services Inc., et al., Case No. 2:23-CV-00468-JRG-RSP, DE 31 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 13, 2023), and Cobblestone Wireless, LLC v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., Case No. 2:22-CV-00477-JRG-RSP, DE 70 (E.D. Tex. Apr. 13, 2023).

I. INTRODUCTION

In its complaints, Headwater accuses Defendants of infringing its patents through Defendants’ use of 4G LTE and 5G base stations, nodes, and related network equipment and services that support certain functionalities including 5G NR adaptive beamforming and 5G NR Integrated Access Backhaul (collectively, the “Accused Products”). See DE 1 (“T-Mobile Complaint”) at ¶¶ 22, 35 and 43; Case No. 2:24-cv-00016, DE 1 (“AT&T Complaint”) at ¶¶ 21, 34 and 42; Case No. 2:24-cv-00007

(“Verizon Case”), DE 1 (“Verizon Complaint”) at ¶¶ 20, 33 and 41. Nokia designs, manufactures, markets and sells at least some Accused Products for and to Defendants.

Nokia moves to intervene as a matter of right. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a). As the designer and manufacturer of Accused Products, Nokia is likely to be in the best position to defend those products against certain of Headwater’s infringement allegations. Nokia has a direct financial interest in the litigation because Nokia has the right to defend its products against these allegations of infringement and has received a request to indemnify Defendants for certain defense costs that could result from the allegations made against its products. Further, the existence of the disputes alone could negatively affect Nokia’s ability to sell its Accused Products to Defendants and other customers.

In the alternative, Nokia respectfully requests permission to intervene under Rule 24(b). Permissive intervention is appropriate because Nokia has claims that share questions of law or fact with Defendants. Nokia’s claims and defenses relate to the invalidity and noninfringement of the asserted patents, and therefore share questions of law and fact with Headwater’s claims and Defendants’ defenses. Finally, because the cases are in their early stages, Nokia’s intervention will not result in any case delay, and Nokia will not seek a transfer of the cases to another venue if the Court grants this Motion.

II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Nature and State of Proceedings

On January 5, 2024, Headwater brought the instant action against Verizon alleging infringement of the ’868 and ’502 Patents. Verizon Complaint at ¶ 1. On January 10, 2024, Headwater brought the instant actions against T-Mobile and AT&T, where it also alleged infringement of the ’868 and ’502 Patents. T-Mobile Complaint at ¶ 1; AT&T Complaint at ¶ 1. The cases remain in their early stages: Defendants served their Invalidity Contentions on May 20, 2024, pursuant to the Docket Control Orders (DE 42; Case No. Verizon Case, DE 33). The claim construction hearings will not occur until March 7, 2025. See DE 42; Verizon Case, DE 33.

B. Headwater Asserts Infringement of Accused Products that Are Designed, Manufactured, Marketed and Sold by Nokia

The '868 Patent is directed, in part, to methods for estimating a mobile device's link quality based on its positioning. See T-Mobile Complaint at ¶ 16; AT&T Complaint at ¶ 16; Verizon Complaint at ¶ 16. Headwater appears to accuse Defendants' 4G and 5G Accused Products that support 5G NR adaptive beamforming of infringing the '868 Patent. See T-Mobile Complaint at ¶ 35; AT&T Complaint at ¶ 34; Verizon Complaint at ¶ 33. Nokia designs, manufactures, markets and sells at least some Accused Products. In addition, Nokia supplied Defendants with at least some of the Accused Products. Id.

The '502 Patent is directed, in part, to methods for managing backhaul in cellular telecommunications networks by using backhaul user equipment devices. See T-Mobile Complaint at ¶ 40; AT&T Complaint at ¶ 39; Verizon Complaint at ¶ 38. Headwater appears to accuse all Accused Products of infringing the '502 Patent. See T-Mobile Complaint at ¶ 43; AT&T Complaint at ¶ 42; Verizon Complaint at ¶ 41. Nokia designs, manufactures, markets and sells at least some Accused Products. In addition, Nokia supplied Defendants with at least some of the Accused Products. Id.

Neither Plaintiff Headwater nor Defendants oppose Nokia's request to intervene. Baron Decl. ¶¶ 2-3.

III. LEGAL STANDARD

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 24 permits a party to intervene either under Rule 24(a), when they have a right to do so, or under Rule 24(b), by permission of the court. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24. A movant must be permitted to intervene when the four requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2) are met:

- (1) the application for intervention must be timely; (2) the applicant must have an interest relating to the property or transaction which is the subject of the action; (3)

the applicant must be so situated that the disposition of the action may, as a practical matter, impair or impede his ability to protect that interest; (4) the applicant's interest must be inadequately represented by the existing parties to the suit.

Texas v. United States, 805 F.3d 653, 657 (5th Cir. 2015) (quoting New Orleans Pub. Serv., Inc. v. United Gas Pipe Line Co., 732 F.2d 452, 463 (5th Cir. 1984) (en banc)). Because the issue of intervention is not unique to patent law, Fifth Circuit law controls. See Stauffer v. Brooks Brothers, Inc., 619 F.3d 1321, 1328 (Fed. Cir. 2010) (denial of intervention reviewed under regional circuit's law). Rule 24 is to be "liberally construed," under Fifth Circuit law. Texas, 805 F.3d at 656-57 (quoting Brumfield v. Dodd, 749 F.3d 339, 341 (5th Cir. 2014)). See also Sierra Club v. Espy, 18 F.3d 1202, 1205 (5th Cir. 1994)) ("Federal courts should allow intervention where no one would be hurt and the greater justice could be attained." (quoting McDonald v. E.J. Lavino Co., 430 F.2d 1065, 1074 (5th Cir. 1970)) (internal quotation marks omitted)); City of Houston v. Am. Traffic Sols., Inc., 668 F.3d 291, 293 (5th Cir. 2012) (noting that intervention as of right "must be measured by a practical rather than technical yardstick.") (quoting Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 999 (5th Cir. 1996) (en banc)) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Under Rule 24(b)(1)(B), the Court may permit a party to intervene if the party has a claim or defense that shares a common question of law or fact with the main action. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B). "The decision to permit intervention under Rule 24(b)(2) requires a threshold determination that the applicant's claim or defense and the main action have a question of law or fact in common." Newby v. Enron Corp., 443 F.3d 416, 421 (5th Cir. 2006) (quoting Howse v. S/V "Canada Goose I", 641 F.2d 317, 322 (5th Cir. 1981)) (internal quotation marks omitted).

IV. ARGUMENT

A. Nokia Has a Right to Intervene Pursuant to Rule 24(a)(2)

Nokia meets the four requirements to intervene as of right under Rule 24(a). See Texas, 805 F.3d at 657. Nokia acted promptly in bringing this motion, and no existing party will suffer prejudice if Nokia intervenes. Nokia has a direct financial interest in the litigation because it has the right to defend its products against these allegations of infringement and its customers that are Defendants have demanded indemnification from Ericsson based on the nature of Headwater's infringement allegations. In addition, as a manufacturer of some products accused in the litigation, Nokia has a unique interest in defending against infringement claims that, by their mere existence, could jeopardize its ability to provide those products to Defendants and other customers. As a designer of some products accused in the litigation, Nokia is the party most knowledgeable regarding how those products function, which will be an issue as the cases progress. As a result, Nokia has a right to intervene and defend its interests in these cases.

1. Nokia's Motion to Intervene is Timely

Nokia's motion is timely because it seeks to intervene at the beginning of the litigation and no party to the suit will suffer prejudice should Nokia intervene. Timeliness is determined from all circumstances in a case, including the time elapsed between notice of the intervenor's interest in the case and the filing of the motion to intervene, the extent of prejudice to existing parties as a result of the motion, the extent of prejudice to the moving party if leave to intervene is denied and the existence of unusual circumstances militating either for or against a determination that the motion is timely. Edwards, 78 F.3d at 1000 (citing Stallworth v. Monsanto Co., 558 F.2d 257 (5th Cir. 1977)). "A motion to intervene may still be timely even if all the factors do not weigh in favor of a finding of timeliness." John Doe No. 1 v. Glickman, 256 F.3d 371, 375 (5th Cir. 2001).

First, Nokia brings this Motion while these cases are in their early stages: Defendants recently served their Invalidity Contentions on May 20, 2024, pursuant to the Docket Control Orders (DE 42; Verizon Case, DE 33). See also TiVo Inc. v. AT&T, Inc., C.A. No. 2:09-CV-259, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 146363, at *18 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 31, 2010) (a motion to intervene was timely where nearly five months elapsed between filing of complaint and motion to intervene); Edwards, 78 F.3d at 1001

(“[M]ost of [the Fifth Circuit’s] case law rejecting petitions for intervention as untimely concern motions filed after judgment was entered in the litigation”). As a result, Nokia’s intervention will not delay the cases.

Second, in part because Nokia is seeking to intervene so early in the litigation, no party to the lawsuits will suffer prejudice if Nokia intervenes. See Sierra Club, 18 F.3d at 1205 (“The requirement of timeliness is not a tool of retribution to punish the tardy would-be intervenor, but rather a guard against prejudicing the original parties by the failure to apply sooner.”). Neither Plaintiff Headwater nor Defendants oppose Nokia’s request to intervene. Baron Decl. ¶¶ 2-3. Far from imposing any prejudice, Nokia’s presence in the lawsuits will streamline discovery regarding the Accused Products because Nokia designed and manufactured at least some of those products.

Third, Nokia will suffer prejudice if not allowed to intervene and defend its Accused Products against Headwater’s claims. As discussed in Section IV.A.4 below, Nokia is most likely to be in the best position to defend its products because Nokia designed and manufactured at least some of those products. Honeywell Int’l Inc. v. Audiovox Commc’ns Corp., Case No. 04-1337-KAJ, 2005 WL 2465898, at *4 (D. Del. May 18, 2005). Nokia possesses documentation and information relating to how some of the Accused Products function, which will be a central issue in the litigation. T-Mobile Complaint at ¶¶ 35 and 43; AT&T Complaint at ¶¶ 34 and 42; Verizon Complaint at ¶¶ 33 and 41. Absent intervention, Nokia would not have the opportunity to provide the best defense of its products.

Finally, Nokia is unaware of any unusual circumstances militating against a determination that the motion is timely. As discussed above, the circumstances of these cases militate in favor of a finding of timeliness. Indeed, Nokia’s intervention will not negatively affect the cases’ progress, and no party has opposed Nokia’s intervention. Baron Decl. ¶¶ 2-3.

2. Nokia Has a Significant Interest in this Lawsuit

Nokia has a “direct, substantial, legally protectable interest in the proceedings.” Texas, 805

F.3d at 657 (quoting Edwards, 78 F.3d at 1004) (internal quotation marks omitted). See also Sierra Club, 18 F.3d at 1207 (“[T]he ‘interest’ test is primarily a practical guide to disposing of lawsuits by involving as many apparently concerned persons as is compatible with efficiency and due process.” (quoting Ceres Gulf v. Cooper, 957 F.2d 1199, 1203 (5th Cir. 1992) (internal quotation marks omitted))). Nokia’s interest stems from its right to defend its products, its position as the designer and manufacturer of some of the Accused Products as well as the risk that the existence of Headwater’s allegations could negatively affect Nokia’s future sales of the Accused Products. Team Worldwide Corp. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., No. 2:17-CV-00235-JRG, 2017 WL 6059303, at *4, *13 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 7, 2017); Honeywell, 2005 WL 2465898, at *4.

First, Defendants are Nokia’s customers and each has demanded indemnification based on the nature of Headwater’s infringement allegations directed to Nokia’s 4G LTE and 5G base stations, nodes, and related network equipment, as described above. In light of Headwater’s infringement allegations, there can be no serious dispute that Nokia may be injured under the circumstances of this case, if it is not permitted to intervene in this suit to defend allegations of infringement with respect to Nokia base stations, nodes, and related network equipment. Team Worldwide Corp., 2017 WL 6059303, at *4 (“Where the named defendant ‘will seek indemnification against [the intervenor],’ the interest requirement is met by the intervenor’s ‘interest in having its obligations under the [indemnification agreement] established.’”) (citing Kadlec Med. Ctr. v. Lakeview Anesthesia Associates, CIV.A. 04-997, 2004 WL 2035005, at *2 (E.D. La. Sept. 10, 2004)).

Second, courts have long recognized that manufacturers of accused products have a substantial interest in patent litigation against their customers. See Honeywell, 2005 WL 2465898, at *4 (“[Intervenor] has a sufficient interest in the litigation; indeed, as a manufacturer of the product component which is at the heart of these cases, it has a compelling interest.”). C.f. Kahn v. Gen. Motors Corp., 889 F.2d 1078, 1081 (Fed. Cir. 1989) (explaining the “customer suit exception” exists because a manufacturer has a “presumed greater interest in defending its actions against charges of patent infringement”); Microsoft Corp. v. Commonwealth Scientific & Indus. Research Organisation, No. 6:06-CV-549, 2007 WL 4376104, at *2 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 13, 2007), aff’d sub nom Commonwealth Scientific & Indus. Research Organisation v. Toshiba Am. Info. Sys., Inc., 297 F. App’x 970 (Fed. Cir. 2008) (“Underlying the customer-suit doctrine is the preference that infringement determinations should be made in suits involving the true defendant in the plaintiff’s suit, i.e., the party that controls the product’s design, rather than in suits involving secondary parties, i.e. customers. The guiding principles in the customer suit exception cases are efficiency and judicial economy.”) (citation omitted). Headwater has brought infringement claims against Defendants’ use of some products that Nokia designed and manufactured. T-Mobile Complaint at ¶¶ 35 and 43; AT&T Complaint at ¶¶ 34 and 42; Verizon Complaint at ¶¶ 33 and 41. As a result, Nokia has a strong interest in defending those claims.

Lastly, Nokia has an interest in protecting ongoing sales of its Accused Products. See, e.g., Team Worldwide Corp. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., Civ. Action No. 2:17-cv-00235-JRG, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 201769, at *13 (E.D. Tex. Dec. 7, 2017) (finding an intervening manufacturer had an interest in “the ongoing sale and distribution of their products [which] is put at risk by [the Plaintiff’s] allegations of infringement.”); Intellectual Ventures I LLC v. AT&T Mobility LLC, C.A. No. 12-193-LPS et al., 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 125280, at *13 (D. Del. Sept. 8, 2014) (finding that an intervening manufacturer had an “interest in products which Intervenor manufacture for Defendants, an interest put at risk by the litigation as Plaintiffs accuse these products of infringement.”). The existence of the litigation could negatively affect Nokia’s sales of Accused Products not only to Defendants, but also to other customers. See U.S. Ethernet Innovations, LLC v. Acer, Inc., Civil No. 6:09-cv-448-JDL, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 150649, at *13 (E.D. Tex. May 10, 2010) (“a manufacturer such as [the Intervenor] faces the loss of its customer base and reputation as a result of patent infringement allegations.”). This risk to Nokia’s customer base and reputation is “magnified by its indemnity obligation.” Uniloc 2017 LLC v. AT&T Services, Inc., Case No. 2:19-CV-00102-JRG, 2019 WL 1773117, at *3 (E.D. Tex. Sep. 17, 2019).

Accordingly, Nokia’s interest in its ability to sell its Accused Products warrants intervention as of right.

3. Disposition of these Actions May Impair Nokia’s Ability to Protect Its Interests

If Nokia cannot intervene in these actions, disposition of these actions may impair Nokia’s ability to protect and defend its interests. Without intervention, Nokia cannot safeguard prospective sales of its Accused Products. See Indus. Tech. Research Inst. v. LG Elecs., Inc., Case No. 3:13-cv2016-GPC-WVG, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 148865, at *11 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 15, 2014) (finding that “[the intervening manufacturer] may be unable to sell [the accused product] to U.S. customers if Plaintiff were to succeed in this litigation,” which may “adversely impair [intervenor’s] significantly protectable interest”). An adverse judgment could undermine the confidence that other customers have in the Accused Products and more generally in Nokia products. Team Worldwide, 2017 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 201769, at *5 (“[A]dverse rulings could impact each proposed intervenor’s relationships with other retail customers.”). As a result, the disposition of these actions may impair Nokia’s ability to protect its interests if it cannot intervene.

4. Defendants Cannot Adequately Represent Nokia’s Interests

Defendants cannot adequately represent Nokia’s interests because Defendants are likely not as “well- situated to understand and defend [Nokia’s] products” as is Nokia. Intellectual Ventures, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 125280, at *13-14. In the Fifth Circuit, in order to satisfy the “inadequate representation” requirement of Rule 24(a)(2), Nokia must merely demonstrate that its interests “may be” inadequately represented by the existing parties. Texas, 805 F.3d at 661. Although Nokia bears the burden to establish inadequate representation, that burden is minimal. Id.

Nokia and its employees – not Defendants – possess the most substantial knowledge regarding certain aspects of the Nokia Accused Products’ design and function. Honeywell, 2005 WL 2465898 at *4 (Intervenor “is uniquely situated to understand and defend its own product.”). Nokia also possesses documents related to the design and function of the Nokia Accused Products. T-Mobile Complaint at ¶¶ 35 and 43; AT&T Complaint at ¶¶ 34 and 42; Verizon Complaint at ¶¶ 33 and 41. As a result, Nokia is better suited to defend its Accused Products than are Defendants.

Because Nokia satisfies the Fifth Circuit’s four-part test for interventions of right under Rule 24(a), the Court should grant Nokia’s Motion as a matter of right. See Edwards, 78 F.3d at 1000.

B. In the Alternative, Nokia Should Be Permitted to Intervene

As discussed above, because Nokia has met all four requirements of Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a), Nokia may intervene as a matter of right. In the alternative, however, Nokia respectfully requests the Court’s permission to intervene under Federal Rule 24(b). Rule 24(b) permits intervention by a party who “has a claim or defense that shares with the main action a common question of law or fact.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B). Permissive intervention presents a lower bar than intervention as a matter of right, and does not require that the intervenor even “have a direct personal or pecuniary interest in the subject of the litigation.” Newby v. Enron Corp., 443 F.3d 416, 423 (5th Cir. 2006) (quoting Sec. and Exch. Comm’n v. U.S. Realty & Imp. Co., 310 U.S. 434, 459 (1940)).

Permissive intervention would be appropriate in these cases because Headwater’s infringement allegations are in part directed to Accused Products supplied by Nokia. T-Mobile Complaint at ¶¶ 35 and 43; AT&T Complaint at ¶¶ 34 and 42; Verizon Complaint at ¶¶ 33 and 41. As a result, the Court could potentially determine common issues of claim construction, non-infringement, invalidity and other matters that bear directly on Nokia’s interests as well as Defendants’. See, e.g., U.S. Ethernet, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 150649, at *12 (granting permissive intervention where intervenor shared common questions of law and fact and similar defenses as named defendant); Reid v. General Motors Corp., 240 F.R.D. 257, 260 (E.D. Tex. 2006) (granting intervention where intervenor's claims of non-infringement, invalidity and unenforceability shared common questions of law and fact as those of its customers who were the named defendants). As noted above in Section IV.A.1, at this early stage in the litigation, there will be no prejudice to either Headwater or Defendants if Nokia is permitted to intervene. Finally, Nokia's intervention will not result in any delay in the cases.
